My experience of joining NCC,

Being an NCC cadet is a motivating and enthusiastic feeling for me. I have a loads of good memories with me in NCC tenure. The most essential part that I learned in NCC is that you must build team spirit and commandership with each other. (In campaign from eating to sleeping, sleeping to duty and from duties to physical training). My NCC mates were probably the best mates of my life, I have ever made.

Basically an overall point of view being a NCC cadet:-

- The atmosphere you are in is extremely different from a civilian one.
- You will see a change in you after sometimes, when you see seniors extremely disciplined.
- You will learn team work, team spirit. If in case any rule you break, entire team will be punished.

and after a good ragging, you will learn how to manage yourself properly so I don't get myself or others in trouble.

Adding them all, basically I will gain various qualities like punctuality, resilience, discipline and etc.

Wearing an uniform in itself is a matter which someone should proud of. The camps taught me how to manage myself at a given amount of time.

Overall, these years if will shape rest of my life only if I take it seriously and follow all that is being said by our seniors or trainers and follow all orders without hesitation. And lastly we became a best version of us.

Jai Hind, Jai Bharat.

Long live NCC
